

In memoriam: Real estate leaders who died in 2024

Tibor Hollo, Larry Gluck, Neil Shekhter, Donald R. Horton among noteworthy deaths across brokerage, development and policy

Clockwise from left: Alice Mason, Joseph Mattone, Brandon Miller, Frederick Rudd, Donald R. Horton, Gil Neary, Larry Gluck, Virginia Cook, Neil Shekhter and Daniel Goodwin

DEC 27, 2024 AT 8:00 AM

By Cara Eisenpress

Real estate lost leaders from all corners of the industry in 2024. Among them were brokers, builders and policy experts who left their marks, both on the physical environment and in the culture of the work.

The Real Deal memorializes their legacies below, in chronological order.

Tibor Hollo

Tibor Hollo

The developer, who helped shape Miami's skyline, died at the age of 96 on May 1. Hollo, a Holocaust survivor, founded his family-owned Florida East Coast Realty after moving to Miami in 1956. He later served as chairman and president, building residential, commercial and mixed-use buildings including Panorama Tower in Brickell, one of the tallest buildings along the Eastern Seaboard south of New York. Hollo's largest real estate deal was the $363 million sale of the waterfront development site at 1201 Brickell Bay Drive to billionaire hedge fund manager Ken Griffin in 2022.